BREATHITI COUNTY NEWS.

J. WISE HAGINS, Editor and Publisher

A NEWSPAPER DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF EASTERN KENTUCKY.

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

Volume IV.

Jackson, Kentucky, Friday, December 23, 1904.

Number 11.

A Doll's Christmas

A Quaint Tale of Life In the Nursery When Little Boys and Girls Are All Sound

.....By LAWTON JOHNSON

Copyright, 1904, by C. N. Lurie

on the hearth. Stockings were banging to the mantel to be filled with toys for the children who were sleep- them to get back to bed and not take what they were to receive in the morning and tumbling over one another, soundly, doubtless dreaming of ing. The face of one of them, a delicate, fair haired boy, was turned toward the dolf, and she did not tire looking at it, for the face, though pale and thin, was very delicately molded.

On the mantel were two figures in porcelain. One was a boy in an oll fashioned coat and knee breeches, with a sash around his waist and a cockel hat and feather. His right hand was thrust into his coat in front, and he looked like a figure of Napoleon. The other was a girl, with a short dress and a satior hat. Her head was poised one side, and she looked very well in on the brass andirons and fender, satisfied with herself. Indeed, she was and after dinner stories were told the age to the doll. "Don't you think this that happen. The boy with the light

NE Christmas eve a wax doll sat other children. The doll noticed that on a chair in a pretty room la be had great blue eyes, which seemed which a number of children ever so large as he looked wonderingly were in bed. A fire was burn at all that was going on. Then there came a knocking on the wall, and the children knew that it was a signal for > and covered themselves up. Presently the father and mother came in and distributed the toys. The doll was for one of the girls, but the boy insisted on baving it himself. Then when all were loaded with presents they carried them down to the breakfast room

What a day it was! The children were racing about, playing with their toys, and people were coming in continually to see the presents, and the sun shone brightly on the snow outside, and the fire shone brightly with-"How do you do?" said the girl im- by the number of wonderful things hair and blue eyes lay in his mother's Indeed it is, but I've not see many. arms, hugging the doll with her breast She paused to pressed against his, so that she could think again when she was born, but hear his heart beat, and she wondered couldn't remember, so she said instead, why there was no such beating in her "Isn't it a beautiful world?" "Do you think so?" said the boy.

WRITING TO DEAR OLD SANTA CLAUS.

getting into it. We were baked in a that nothing in the world could ever furnace, and it was so hot"-"Well, don't tell me about it," interrupted the doll. "I'd rather hear about pleasant places." The figures told her a great many things, but the girl was very vain of her beauty, and the boy was taken up | before the fire where he could see it with what he knew about the world, till he should go to sleep and the first of which the doll knew nothing at all, thing on awakening in the morning. so she didn't listen long, but fell asleep while they were talking. What was that noise in the chimney? too happy to go to sleep. She had scarcely time to think about it when out on the hearth popped a lit- said. tle figure in fur. He unstrapped a pack he carried and filled all the stockings "till you have been knocked about the with toys. Then he jumped back into world awhile and you'll see." He lookthe chimney and was gone in a twin- ed as wise as an owl. kling. This set the doll to wondering more than ever. Everything was again silent except the clock, which ticked very loud. There were the children asleep in bed, the little pale faced boy with his head resting on his arm, the girl image on thinking how pretty she was and the awhile, but presently it seemed to be ch ttering like monkeys. The fair haired, sy sat up in bed and looked on, for the was too delicate to get up like the "You're going," said the boy figure own heart. This was the happiest moment she had ever known. She was "My sister and I have had a hard time only a day old, but something told ber make her happier.

When the children went upstairs the boy insisted on keeping the doll by him till he got into bed, when his mother persuaded him to part with it till morning. She placed it on a chair

When the children were all asleep the doll looked up from the chair at Suddenly she awoke with a start. the images on the mantel. She was

"What a lovely day I have had," she "Just wait," replied the boy image,

"I think it very nice," said the girl image, "so long as you are young and bretty, but I don't like the idea of getting old and cracked, perhaps having my arms or legs broken off."

The wind was rising without, and suddenly the fire blazed with a cheerthe mantel with her head on one side ful warmth. It was very pleasant for boy thinking how much he knew about too hot. The doll thought she began to the world. The doll soon went to sleep feel a softening in her feet. She didn't know what it meant, but it frightened In the morning she was awakened her. It extended to her legs; then she by a shouting. The children were run-ning about in their night clothes, tak-face and neck. A log of wood fell ing their toys from their stockings and down on the coals, and the fire blazed world isn't all like this household."

"SANTA CLAUS HAS BEEN HERE."

as well, for it is here."

her voice that even the images refrain- fond arms of her blue eyed boy, ed from any further remarks. The fire blazed hotter, and the wax, which had as yet only softened, began to melt. Something spattered on the floor. It How the Day Is Celebrated In the was a drop of melted wax.

Oh, that her little boy would get up and move her back from the fire! But he slept on peacefully, and as she had no voice for real children she couldn't might never have been born at all, the occasion. The mass is celebrated never have had the one glimpse of the with every concomitant that can happy household, the one Christmas, heighten its effect and grandeur.

on the mantel. "It's just as well; the the blue eyed boy and her single day of love. So she said: "I can't under "It's just as well," echoed the girl stand it. I will try not to murmur, but "Your beauty will not have to trust that it is all for the best."

"I don't want to go," cried the doll And then-and then she awoke! The mournfully. "I want to stay with my horror of melting had only been a blue eyed boy. The world may be full dream. She had fallen asleep before of sadness, but there must be pleasure the hot fire, but some kind had had There was something so plaintive in moments she was again clasped in the

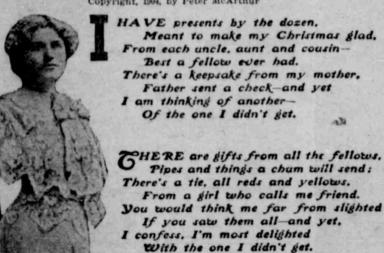

CHRISTMAS IN MEXICO.

Land of Diaz. In Mexico Christmas eve is observed. as in Spain, with the Noche Buena. The streets and plazas are thronged with people. Of all the shop windows so So the doll felt that she was melting gay and brilliant in their holiday ataway. Drop by drop she fell on the tire none is so bright as the confection-The room, with its rich hang- er's. Nowhere is the confectioner's art ings, the children sleeping, the firelight carried to a greater perfection. At flickering, the shadows and, above all, midnight of the Noche Buena all Mexthe memory of her brief existence-for, ico forsakes its pleasures and repairs after all, a doll can only exist-seemed to the Misa del Gallo, or mass of the to be gradually fading away. She sigh- cock, a high mass of the most imposed to think that she couldn't have been ing character, which, in every one of born with a soul, to be loved and go the magnificent temples reared by the on loving forever; that she could not Catholic church in the City of Mexico. grow up like a real child to see the un- is celebrated exactly at midnight on folding of all the wonderful things in Christmas eve or morning to commemthe world, passing from one existence orate the Saviour's birth. All the to another instead of going out alto- churches have an augmented choir and gether. Then she thought that she a large orchestra specially engaged for

The Gift I Didn't Get

A Christmas Poem by Peter McArthur

Copyright, 1904, by Peter McArthur

SHE told me it was ready. She'd prepared it long before; I'd been calling on her steady For at least a year or more. She told me all about it. And her eyes with tears were wet. And I'm happy, never doubt it. For that gift I didn't get.

HER attitude was altered When I called on her last night. But my tale of love I faltered. And I guess I did it right. And this little rhyme is written 'Cause I'm full of joy-you bet! For a frosty little mitten Was the gift I didn't get.

A Girl Who Calls Me Friend

WWWWWWWWWWWWW

The Christmas

How It Originated, How It Is Secured For the Market, and Some Interesting Legends of the Dim Past

WALTON WILLIAMS

THE Christmas tree goes so far back into the night of time that it is quite impossible to tell where or by whom it was first from the "service tree," which germinated from soil soaked by the blood of two unfortunate lovers, a claim substantiated by the statement that at Christmastide inextinguishable lights French romance of the thirteenth century a great tree is described whose branches are covered with burning of a child with a halo round its head, the tree and candles representing mankind and the child the infant Saviour.

A beautiful German story credits St. had been an object of the worship to in 1840 by the Duchess Helena. mediately appeared in its place, on seeing which St. Winfred said: "This lit

The Greeks also call Christmas the Feast of Lights. The Romans in their saturnalia decorated trees with images of Roman gods as well as with candles and burned Yule logs in honor of these gods. introduced. Almost every country has The early Christians, however, frown-its legend claiming for its own the tree ed upon all such pagan adjuncts to the of its magic powers. which bears such generous fruit. In Christmas celebration, With them the Scandinavia it is said to have sprung Feast of the Nativity was the extreme of solemnity, and they were as much opposed to Christmas trees and lights, music and laughter, as were the Puritans. The first authentic account of the gleamed from its green branches. In a Christmas tree is not recorded until the sixteenth century. It appears in a German manuscript, and, as the Germans responded least to Latin influences of candles and on whose top is the vision all the nations which fell heir to the Roman empire's lands, to them rather than to the Romans must be ascribed the honor of introducing it. It was the marriage of Queen Victoria to a Winfred with giving the Christmas German prince which brought the modtree to the world. The story is illus- ern Christmas tree to England, and a trative of the gospel supplanting pa- German immigrant started the custom ganism, Before a group of converts in America. The first Christmas tree St. Winfred felled a great oak which in France was lighted in the Tuileries the Druids. A fine young fir tree im- To view the great heaps of Christ-

TAKING HOME THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

tle tree, a young child of the forest, mas trees which line the market streets shall be your holy tree tonight. It is of our big cities just before the holfthe wood of peace, for your houses are days one would fancy that scarcely a built of fir. It is the sign of an end- tree could be left standing of the murless life, for its leaves are ever green. muring hemlocks which constituted See how it points upward to heaven. Longfellow's forest primeval. Every Let it be called the tree of the Christ hard timber state in the Union is call-Child. Gather about it, not in the wild- ed upon by Santa Claus for its tribute wood, but in your homes. There it will of redolent balsam that be may have and cutting a little fir tree, brought it $15 an acre. into the nursery, put some candles on The Christmas tree cutters begin its branches and lighted them to re- work early, usually about the middle produce the effect of the beautiful of October. While some of the men are moonlit trees in the forest.

which was celebrated at this season. brittle, and they break in transit, shelter no deeds of blood, but loving plenty of places on which to hang his

Many Germans hold that Martin There is only one true Christmas tree Luther first conceived the Christmas -the balsam fir. The hemlock proper tree. One of the most popular of Ger- has branches too drooping and flexible man engravings represents him sitting to hold a great weight of Christmas in the bosom of his family, with a gifts, and the spruce, while otherwise lighted Christmas tree on the table suitable, lacks the spicy odor of the before him. Luther was traveling balsam. This is fortunate, for the tree alone one Christmas eve. The snow most prized for Christmas purposes is covered country and the trees gleaming utterly despised by the lumbermen. at every point with the reflected light Before the Christmas tree industry be of the winter moon made upon the gan the fir lands of Maine were actualgreat reformer the deepest impression. ly exempted from taxation as worth-Going home, he went into the garden less. Now they are worth from $10 to sutting others follow them and drag Antiquarians connect the Christmas the trees to the nearest open space, tree with the great tree Yggdrasil of where they are bunched and tied so Norse mythology or with the pine trees that they will not come apart in shipof the Roman saturnalia, the pagan ping. At the nearest depot they are forerunner of our Christmas. Others loaded on cars, 2,500 trees to the car. look to the ancient Egyptians as orig- The men receive $1.50 a day and inators of the idea. These men were board. It takes seven men working wont to decorate their houses at the five weeks to get out three carloads.

time of the winter solstice with . The Christmas tree output depends a branches of the date paim, emblems of good deal on the weather. With an immortality and of the starlit firma- open fall, when the trees are easy to ment. In mediaeval times there was a get at, the crop will be much larger tradition that holiness invested an il- than when the snow falls early and luminated tree. Candles were used by heavily. If the snow melts and then the Jews in their Feast of Lights, freezes on the branches it makes them

THE MYSTIC MISTLETOE.

n Feature of Pagan Rites, It

Now Belongs to Lovers. From time immemorial the white serried mistletoe has played a leading part in Yuleitde festivities, though it has not always conveyed the osculatory privileges which give it its value in the eyes of the romantic youth of today. Like so many other features of the Christmas celebration, mistletoe has been borrowed from the pagans of antiquity and Christianized by the lapse of centuries. The Persians before the birth of Christ used the mistletoe in their sacred rites, and in parts of India pagan priests still incorporate it in their ritual. It figures largely in Scandinavian mythology. Baldur, the son of Odin, though a demigod, was slain by a spear of mistletoe, a proof

It is from the Druids of old England, however, that mistletoe has come to us. The Druidical priests, sprung, it is said, from the magi of the east, the wise men who worshiped at the cradle of the infant Saviour, held the mistletoe as their most sacred possession, and the cutting of the pretty parasite from the oak, the tree which the Druids claimed God loved more than any other, was attended with the greatest solemnity. On the Druids' festival day a grand procession, leading two white oxen, moved to the mystic grove. There the oxen were fastened to the oak by their horns, and a white robed priest climbed into the leafless branches and cut the bunches of mistletoe with a golden knife. The oxen were then sacrificed and religious services performed, after which the procession returned to the temple in the forest and the mistletoe was deposited in the Druidical arcanum. Besides taking its place in the religious observances of the Druids, the mistletoe, which the priests gave a name meaning "all healing," was made into many curious decoctions by processes in which times and seasons and incantations were supposed to add to its mysterious powers. These medicines were regarded as cures for human ills generally, whether of mind or body, With the advance of civilization and the death of superstition mistletoe has lost its religious character, but not its popularity, and the forests of England and of our own southern states are as eagerly frequented by mistletoe gatherers as ever were the dark woods of the ancient Druids.

CHRISTMAS IN SWEDEN.

One Day When There Are Neither

If you were in Sweden on Christmas eve you would hear the church bells begin to ring at 5 o'clock, for every body stops work then and the festivities begin in great earnest everywhere in the kingdom. Class distinctions are forgotten and servants are allowed to sit at table with the family. After supper comes the universal Christmas tree, for Sweden is one of the early homes of this beautiful custom,

On Christmas morning at 6 o'clock, while it is still dark, you would go to church, for everybody goes, unless you stayed at home to mind the lights in the house, for every home in the kingdom is illuminated. There is almost sure to be a deep snow, and you would go to church in a sleigh. Behind every sleigh you would see two boys standing on the runners and holding pine torches-a beautiful spectacle as a long procession of sleighs glides over the snow on a forest road. These torches are stuck up in a circle around the church. A whole week is given to good cheer and hospitality.

A Friendship Calendar.

A friendship calendar as a Christmas gift was a source of much pleasure to an elderly lady living alone, says Good Housekeeping. At her request each one of fifty-two of her friends, representing the fifty-two weeks of the year, furnished material for every day of the seven in his week. Each one followed out his own idea for the week's calendar, contributing favorite quotations, short poems, anecdotes and reminiscences, some even adding cherished recipes. In many instances the contributions were original. Others were illustrated with small pictures cut from current magazines. The result was a perpetual calendar, each day representing the loving thought of a friend.

A Christmas Game.

"Christmas candles" is a good old time game. A lighted candle is placed upon a table. The player is blindfolded and stationed with his back to the candle, about a foot from it. He's then told to take three steps forward, turn around three times, then to walk four steps toward the candle and blow it out. His attempt to do so will probably be as amuning to the audience as disconcerting to himself.—Country Life In America.

The Line Drawn. Ethel-What do you intend to give me for Christmas? Bertie-Would a kiss answer? Ethel (with sarcasm)-No, indeed! Mamma never allows me to accept valuable presents from gentlemen.

There's Christmas smiling in the sky,
There's Christmas in the trees,
There's Christmas in the streets near by,
There's Christmas in the breeze.

It's Christmas, Christmas everywhere, No matter where you look, Save when you gaze with mild despair Into your pocketbook.
-Washington Star.

> Christmas Bills. The Christmas bills Give dad the chills; He'll never climb The heavenly hills Nor wear the angels Wings an' frills
> Because o' them
> Same Christmas bills!
> —Atlanta Constitution